

Islington Council install a Urilift at tube station Farringdon/ Super nightclub The Fabric

Operations Management of Islington's Street Environment Services :

"Islington Council install a pop-up "Urilift" urinal at the corner of St John St and Cowcross Street. The site is particularly suited for the Fabric queue, and by being visible, will be far better known than the temporary urinals that Islington has been installing on Friday and Saturday nights in the area.

This is a response to years of complaints by local people about the sight, and consequences, of clubbers and drinkers urinating in the street and various alleys off them, and recent efforts to get licensed premises to take more responsibility for their customers. It is quite normal to see drinkers outside pubs relieving themselves in the street - rather than using the facilities inside which are available to them."
